The authoritative article printed below will appear as a supplement to The Times and will appear in tomorrow's issue. It is entitled "The Women's Peace Vote." It is a strong plea for the women of the world to realize their potential power and to vote in favor of the peace settlement for the benefit of all. The article has been signed by a number of prominent women intellectuals.

It is estimated that there are over 200 million women in the world, and it is believed that if they all voted, they could have a significant impact on the outcome of the war. The article argues that women have been silent for too long and that it is time for them to be heard. It is also emphasized that voting is not only a right but also a duty, and that women should exercise their power to ensure that peace is achieved.

The article concludes by encouraging women to vote and to be active in the political process. It is hoped that this will lead to a more democratic and just society.

The next article will appear in tomorrow's issue.

---

The Times

Published: January 21, 1917
Copyright © The New York Times

---

Women's Peace Vote

The women of the world are being called upon to take a stand in the coming elections. The question of peace is of utmost importance, and the women of the world must be heard. The time has come for women to take a stand and to vote for peace.

The women of the world have a unique power that cannot be ignored. They are the mothers of the future, and their vote is essential to the future of the world. The women of the world must be active in the political process and must be heard.

The article goes on to discuss the importance of women's suffrage and the need for women to vote in order to ensure that peace is achieved. It is argued that women have a unique perspective on the war and that their vote is essential to the future of the world.

The article concludes by encouraging women to vote and to be active in the political process. It is hoped that this will lead to a more democratic and just society.

The next article will appear in tomorrow's issue.