

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE AGAIN.

When the conditions of war limited the supply of newsprint paper at the end of last Summer, THE NEW YORK TIMES met the situation by a reduction of consumption. Among the changes found necessary was the suspension of the Sunday Magazine Section on Sept. 1. While that part of the Sunday edition had won a high place in the esteem of our readers, especially in the period during which it had been printed and illustrated by the decorative rotogravure process, it had to give way temporarily; the wartime allowance of paper was not sufficient for the urgent news of the day and the full quota of Sunday special features at the same time. The paper scarcity has been relieved with the ending of war conditions, and after a lapse of four months the Magazine Section will reappear next Sunday.